officials, and this morning Drs. Roberts and Edwards, of the Bureau of Contagious Discases, announced that the culli may remain; that it would be dangerous to remove him, and that he is aiready isolated, and no further precautions are necessary to prevent a spread of the contagion.

The furniture will, according to the Health Officers orders, be thoroughly furnigated, in order to preclude all possibility of the spread of the disease by the sale of the furniture when it is finally disposed of. The physicians also say that if there were other guests in the hotei, they should order the child's removal; but funder the circumstances it is not necessary. Hence it is that Manager Glover is so deeply perplexed. Mrs. Flaine may remain, though consciously an unwelcome guest, at least until her child is recovered.

The Board of Health will not interfere with the sale of the turniture.

Mrs. Flaine's meals are brought from neighboring hotels by her servants, and fresh water is prought in palls from the same source.
